

Children can and do heal from abuse and trauma

If you suspect your child may be a victim of abuse or trauma, the Dee Norton Child Advocacy Center is here to help. The Center has an overwhelming success rate of helping children heal. Here is what the path to healing looks like:

- At the first moment of concern you can receive advice by calling (843) 723-3600.
- To establish a clear record of the concern, an interview with your child by one of our specially-trained professionals may take place.
- Your child may receive a medical examination at the Center by a pediatric specialist from MUSC that helps assure your child, and you, that their body is okay.
- If further assessment is recommended, you and your child meet with staff at the Center to see what, if any, treatment is needed.
- Children and parents meet with therapists one-on-one to discuss a treatment plan.
- Therapy has been well-researched and proven to reduce children's symptoms, and typically last between 10 and 25 sessions.

After treatment, a healed child is ready to get back to being a kid. The Dee Norton Child Advocacy Center is proud to have helped more than 32,000 Lowcountry children since opening in 1991. For more information visit www.DeeNortonCenter.org/aware.
